Sergeant White of the Bechusianal and mounted police, testified to having refused to join Jameson's expedition, and added that Colonel Grey informed the troopers before starting that they were not going to fight for the gueen but for the supremacy of the British flag in South Africa. The sergeant also testified that Commissioner Newton dispatched him from Mafeking, December 30, in pursuit of Jameson's column, telling him to catch the letter at any cost. When witness caught up with the column, he handed his dispatches to Colonel Grey, who ordered him to give them to Sir John Willoughby, who in turn, told Sergeant White to give them to Jameson. The latter, however, sent him back to

Sir John Willoughby, who finally disributed them.

Replying to a question, Sergeant White testified that he did not see any dispatches given to Jameson.

According to White, Sir John Willoughby said:

"Tell your commanding officer the dispatches have been received and will be attended to."

THE DIVORCE GRANTED.

The final details in the divorce proceedings of Lotta Bryan Russel against self a working man, I brought this question prominently before the senate and house labor committees, using as an argument the long hours of labor, and the dangerous occupation of those men in mines and smelters.

The law as it now stands concedes that eight hours shall constitute a day's work for municipal labor, and can we who enjoy that priviledge see our fellow working men tolling ten and twelve hours in mines and smelters.
